I'm Canadian. We have a specific asylum category for LGBTQ+ who fear for their lives are in danger of being killed or imprisoned. Sadly, most of them are African countries.

There is so little coverage on Africa. Many people still think it's one giant piece instead of 54 countries with countless distinct cultures. I'm glad that we get to see people of these countries experiencing similar struggles as people in more popular countries do.

As a young gay male in Namibia it warms my heart to see light being shown on the inequality and discrimination we face here in Namibia. Thank you 🌈❤️

If you don't like same sex marriage then don't get one.

If legalizing same sex marriage will affect your marriage then one of you is gay.

The Colonial Era law and Victorian sensibilities still affect so many countries to this day.

If it is against your religion then do not marry a person of the same sex. That's your religious belief and not everybody else's. Period.

We don't need that in Africa. Keep it in your countries. As long as I'm alive I'll keep on fighting against it.

I am from India and same sex marriage hearings are going on in our SC as well. Not so strangely, the government and conservatives here make the same argument against same sex marriages as they are being made in Namibia. It seems they lack good arguments.

Anyways, I hope that governments and societies of both countries give legal rights and treat

Theres nothing wrong with being gay! 🏳️🌈

Why do people care what others do in their bedrooms?! As long as consenting adults are involved, it doesnt matter

As a black American woman from Chicago, I stand with the LGBTQ+ community. Africa is a beautiful country with crazy people in it. Out of all the issues they have, LGBTQ people should not be one of them. Stay strong <3
